

Cyberbullying

A definition

The rise of technology has created a new form of intimidation, cyberbullying, defined as online mistreatment and repeated attacks through social media and messaging platforms.

Why is this important?

According to the 2017 UK Annual Bullying Survey, 17% of young people have experienced online bullying via social media. The Pew Research Center reported in 2021 that 41% of US adults have experienced online harassment, with a rise in severe encounters reaching 25%, such as physical threats, stalking and sexual abuse.

Tips and tricks

Acknowledge the terms and conditions of the media platform regarding bullying and report to the rightful authorities. If stalking, severe harassment and other crimes are being committed, take screenshots and report the evidence to local authorities.

Seek help, guidance and support if you or someone you know falls victim to this issue.
For more details, check the Safety worksheet "How and whom to ask for help".

Useful resources and tools

Lockett & Lawrenz on HealthLine, "Everything you need to know about cyberbullying", explain different types of online bullying and provide numbers, tips and resources.

Angelica Bottaro on Very Well Health, "The rise and consequences of cyberbullying", provides statistics, laws, examples and advice for parents and victims of all ages.

UNICEF, "Cyberbullying: What is it and how to stop it", lists and answers 11 questions about cyberbullying, how to identify or address it, help victims or punish perpetrators.

Stop Bullying, a federal government website managed by the US Department of Health and Human Services, provides definitions, tips, and resources to fight bullying.

ReThink is a movement and app which detects offensive or hurtful content before it is posted and prompts deleting, blocking or reporting, helping users become responsible.

FindAHelpline is a website that allows you to find a helpline in your country to address bullying, abuse, mental health, discrimination and more.

Funded by the European Union. Views and opinions expressed are however those of the author(s) only and do not necessarily reflect those of the European Union or the European Education and Culture Executive Agency (EACEA). Neither the European Union nor EACEA can be held responsible for them.

